Matching Grant

Matching Grant Program

The Matching Grant Program allows a U.S. private voluntary organization (PVO) to expand a successful program in new places or initiate new projects. The program also enables a U.S. PVO to undertake an experimental or innovative project on the cutting edge of developmental efforts that offers potential for learning and replication.

After twenty-five years, the Matching Grant Program continues to be PVC's principal vehicle for helping U.S. PVOs develop their community-based programs overseas. Matched dollar-for-dollar by the PVO's own resources, the grants support programs consistent with the U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID's) evolving priorities (such as microenterprise development and strategic partnerships) and geographical interests (such as the special needs of Africa, Central Asia, and Central America).

The Matching Grant Program awards competitive grants to PVOs to support clearly defined, field-oriented programs. The programs must be fully conceived and incorporate rigorous evaluation criteria. They may be as broad as the overall scope of a PVO's work or as specific as community-based health services or microenterprise development, but must stay within USAID's legislative mandate and development priorities.

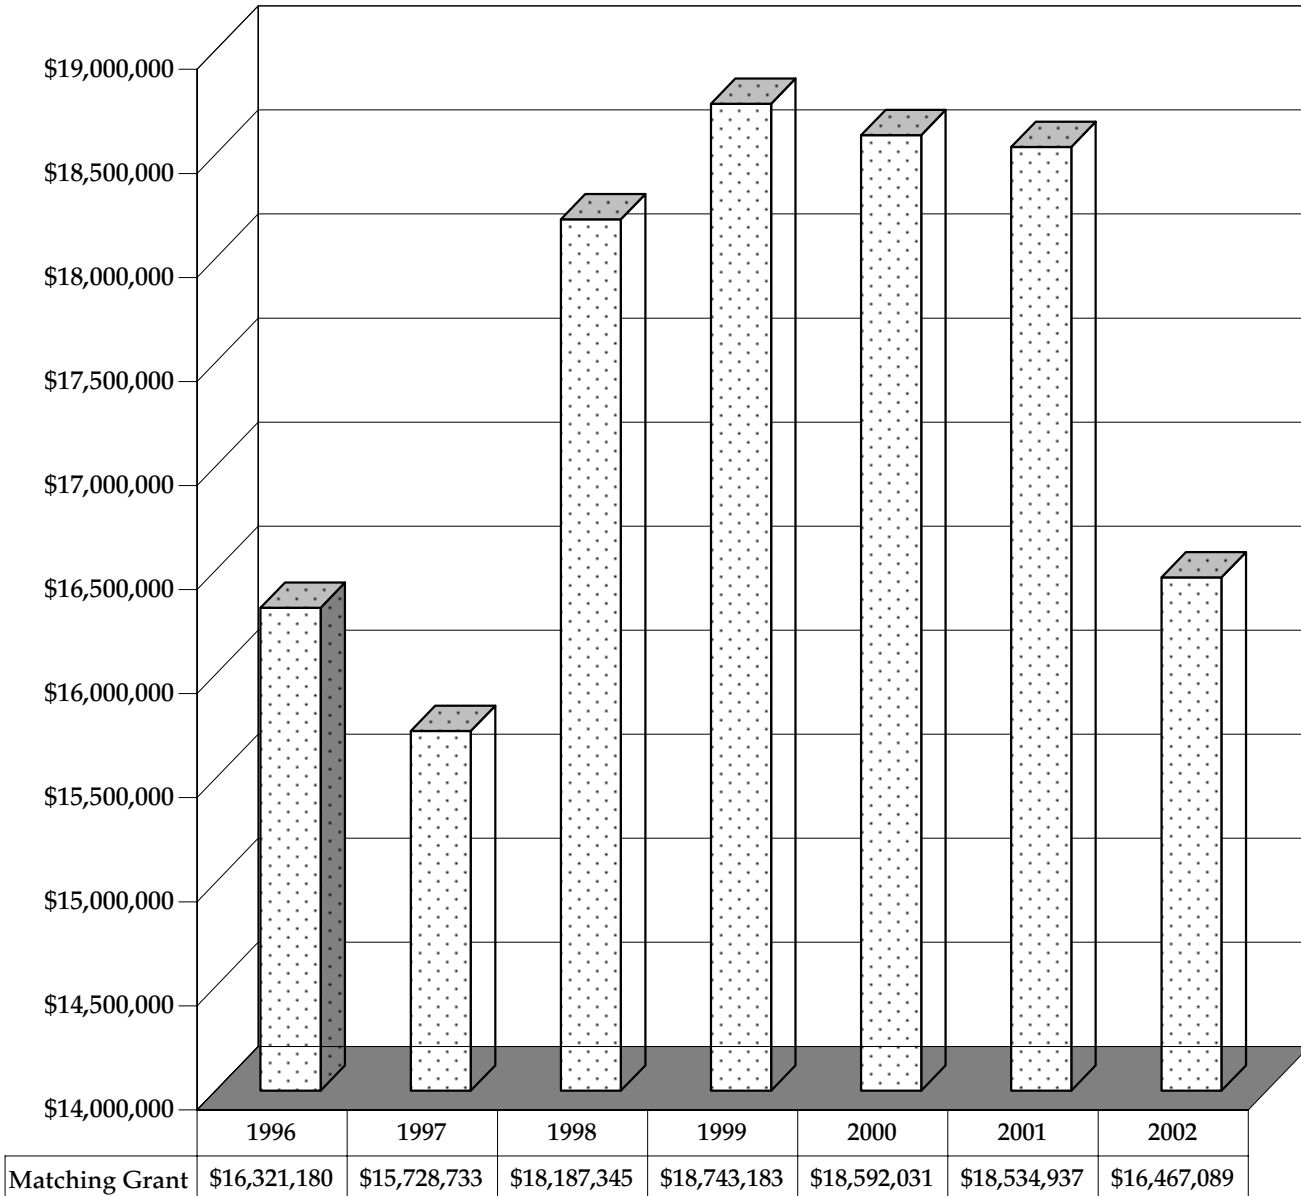

PVOs are awarded these grants based on their demonstrated ability to implement successful, sustainable development programs. The four major objectives are

- to expand and strengthen the field programs of U.S. PVOs in program areas to increase sustainability and results that are consistent with USAID policies and priorities;
- to assist U.S. PVOs to further enhance their planning systems, management systems, and technical competencies so they can carry out development programs;
- to build the capacity of local nongovernmental organizations, governmental organizations, and community-based organizations through formalized partnerships with U.S. PVOs; and
- to increase U.S. private resources for development assistance through a combined public/private partnership by matching private contributions on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

Child Survival

Child Survival Grants Program

The Child Survival Grants Program has been a unique and productive partnership supporting effective, community-oriented child survival programs that measurably improve infant and child health and nutrition and contribute to the reduction of infant and child mortality.

Since 1985, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) has invested congressionally directed funds in community-based child survival and health programs implemented by U.S. private voluntary organizations (PVOs) and their local partners. The objective of PVC in allocating these grants has been to improve the capacity of U.S. PVOs and their local partners to carry out effective child survival and health programs that measurably improve infant and child health and nutrition and contribute to the reduction of infant and child mortality in developing countries. Participation in this grant program has strengthened the organizational, managerial, and technical competencies of PVOs in these areas. DCHA/PVC works with a broad range of organizations that have a wide spectrum of skills and abilities.

DCHA/PVC has funded more than 300 child survival and health programs in 44 countries with more than 35 PVOs since the program's beginning. The rigorous standards of the program have challenged PVOs and their local partners to provide high quality, sustainable, child survival interventions in a variety of program settings from the smallest, most remote communities to large, district-wide programs. DCHA/PVC has elicited feedback from PVO partners to raise the standards of the program, reflect the realities of global development, and incorporate the experience of the PVOs into program guidelines.

The Child Survival Grants Program has aimed for

- programs that have increasing success in meeting their objectives and measurably and equitably improve the health of all children and mothers;
- joint programming of PVOs and USAID operating units for community health activities;
- increased resource mobilization for PVO child survival activities;
- increased technical and operational support from PVOs to local partners and nongovernmental organizations for the design and implementation of child survival programs; and
- U.S. public awareness of the success of PVO child survival programs.

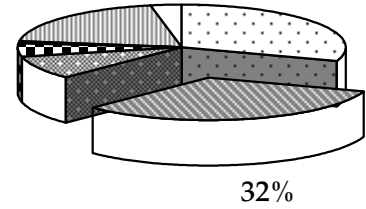

Priorities for the fiscal year 2002 included receiving applications that

- applied effective, innovative, integrated child survival strategies, deliverable at reasonable costs, with a high potential for sustainability – within the capability of the applicant and its partners;
- developed synergies with other programs at the same site (such as food aid, microcredit, water and sanitation, and agriculture) carried out by the same PVO or another complementary organization;
- worked in partnership with regional, national, or local partners; and
- addressed emerging issues (such as malaria and HIV/AIDS) and employ a child survival approach to address the child health needs of the most vulnerable populations.

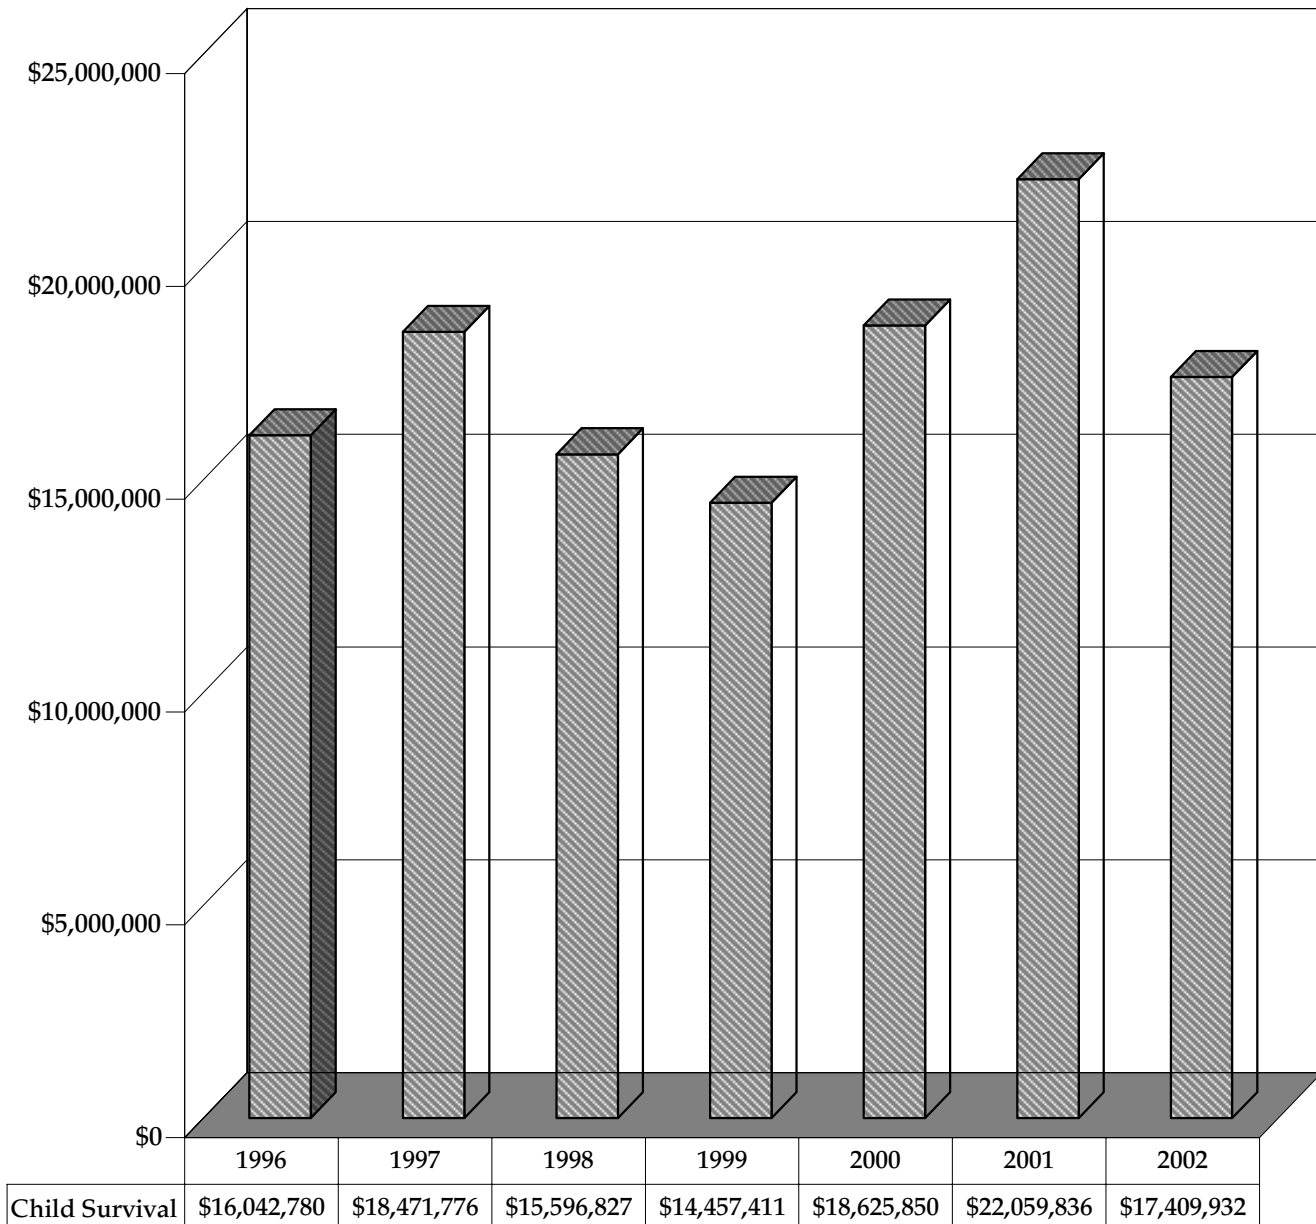

Note: On July 1, 2002, the Child Survival Grants Program was renamed the Child Survival and Health Grants Program (CSHG) and was transferred from the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) to the Office of Health, Infectious Disease, and Nutrition (HIDN) within the Bureau for Global Health (GH).

Cooperative Development

Cooperative Development Program

Self-reliant cooperative enterprises meet the evolving needs of their members and contribute to the quality of their lives, to their communities and nations. As member-owned and controlled institutions, cooperatives foster democratic values and practices.

The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, as amended, encourages the transfer of American cooperative experience and expertise to help the people of developing and transitional economies to create and strengthen cooperative institutions. The U.S. Agency for International Development dedicates support and financial assistance to U.S. cooperative development organizations (CDOs). The Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) manages a competitive grant program, which supports development of innovative approaches to the major challenges faced in cooperative development, their dissemination, and their integration into ongoing programs and projects.

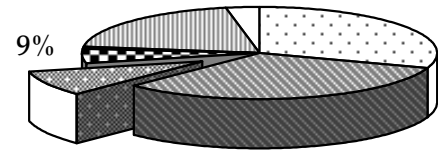

Cooperative Development Program objectives include delivering the quality of support required by CDOs to attract the human, institutional, and financial resources necessary to enhance their impact on the

- reform of cooperative law and regulation and the promotion of a positive environment that enables cooperation;
- effective governance that ensures that democratic control is a reality and not merely rhetoric;
- self-sustaining cooperative movement and expansion within sectors that are consistent with high quality performance;
- bilateral, multilateral, and foundation support for cooperative development that is matched by member funds; and
- U.S. cooperative investments in alliances and joint ventures with developing and transitional economy cooperatives.

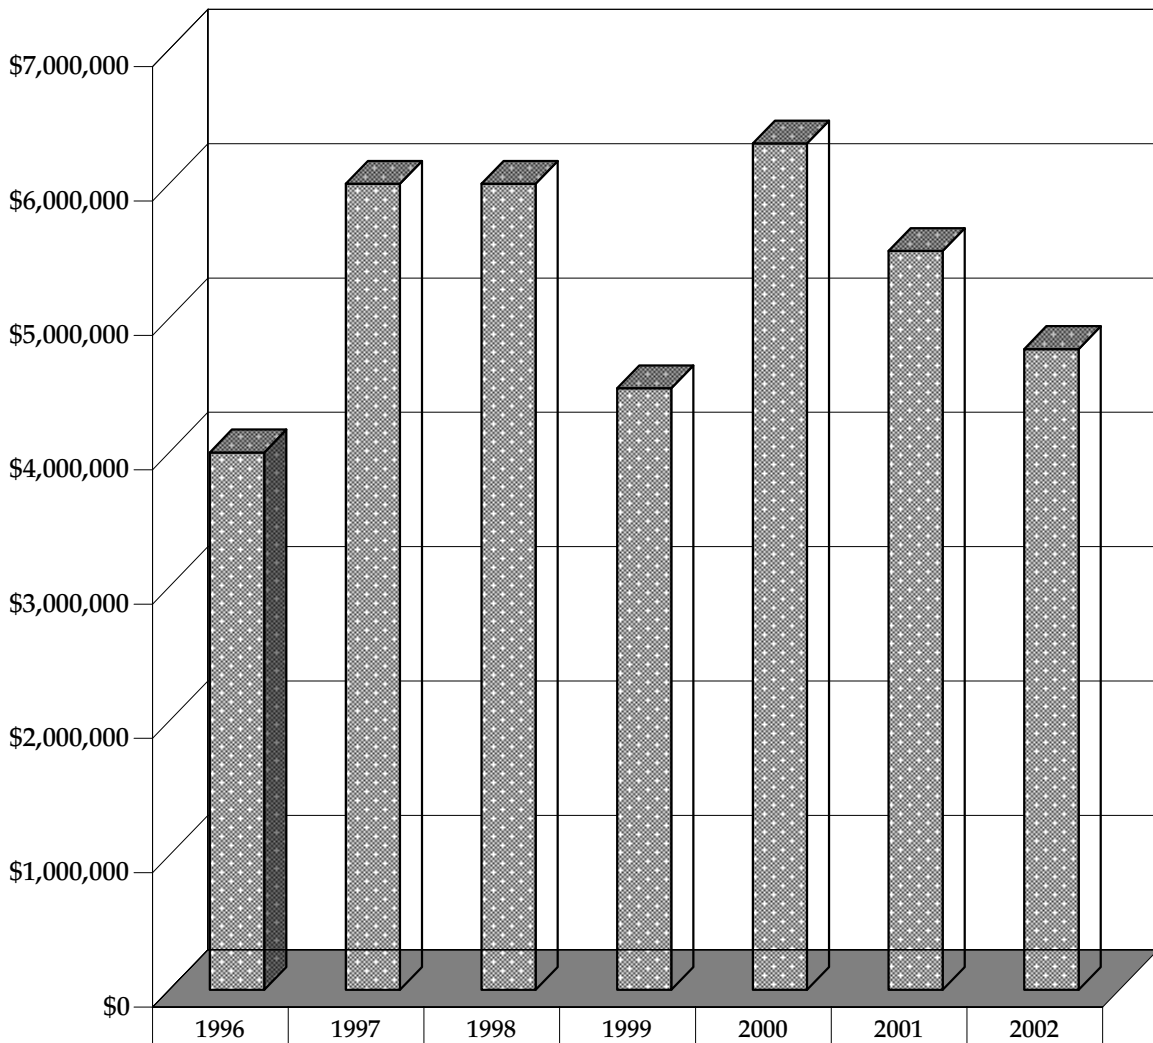

CDOs work in agricultural credit, supply, and marketing; agribusiness; savings and credit; rural telephone and electric services; insurance; health; and housing. CDOs help demonstrate the ways in which cooperation can enable and empower those with limited assets to participate in emerging market economies.

CDOs that have a long-term association with USAID may mentor other eligible U.S. cooperatives that are interested in implementing cooperative development activities overseas.

Development Education

Development Education Program

The Development Education Program provides small grants to support the efforts of U.S. nonprofit organizations to educate Americans about developing countries, the development process, and the importance of developing countries to the United States.

The U.S. Agency for International Development's (USAID's) Development Education Program was authorized in 1980 in response to the Report of the Presidential Commission on World Hunger (under the Biden-Pell Amendment to the International Security and Development Cooperation Act). In 1982, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) established a grants program to promote the widespread discussion and analysis of the causes of hunger and poverty. The program is referred to as both the Development Education Program and the Biden-Pell Program.

The Development Education Program is a public-private initiative designed to foster interest and participation in international development among U.S. citizens. The program supports activities by private, not-for-profit organizations to educate large segments of the American public about U.S. humanitarian relief and development programs overseas. The program helps build national understanding of the importance of these programs to the United States.

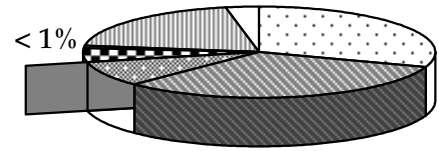

PVC has awarded grants to a broad cross-section of more than 100 organizations, including private voluntary organizations engaged in development assistance; universities; radio, television, and print media sources; cooperatives; service clubs; trade associations; and national membership organizations.

The Development Education Program's strategy emphasizes leveraging financial resources and obtaining the maximum educational impact through partnerships between U.S. nonprofit organizations involved in international development and U.S.-based domestic membership organizations or trade associations that have links to large segments of the American public.

Programs supported by the Biden-Pell grants have a theme of "local-global links." In other words, the programs demonstrate the connections between domestic and international concerns and communicate why international development assistance is in the best long-term interest of the United States. Grantees focus on the environment, trade, health, or other issues that resonate in American communities, and also demonstrate global interdependence. These issues, presented objectively, stimulate informed discussion about development issues and their connection to U.S. concerns.

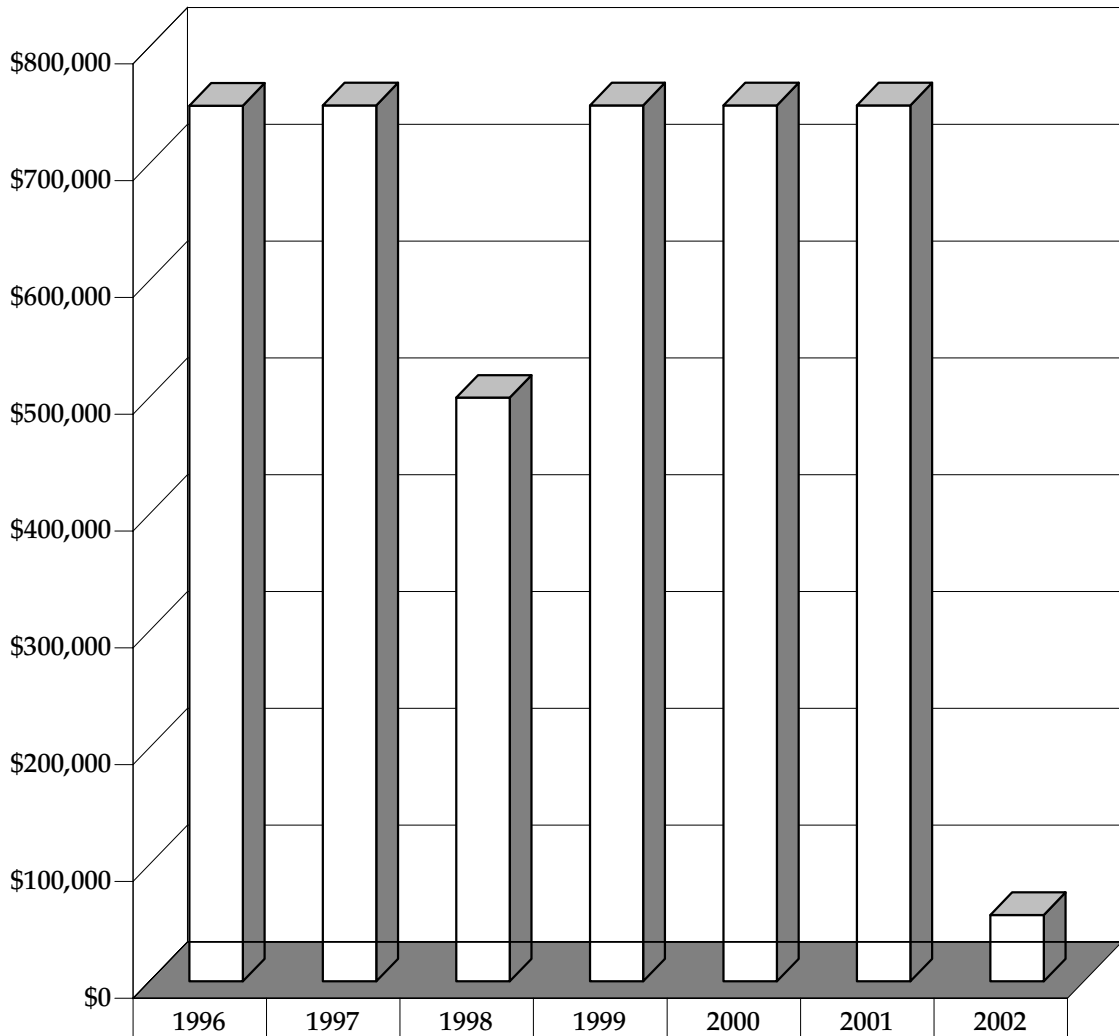

Note: On September 22, 2002, the Development Education Program was transferred from the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) to the Public Liaison Division (PL) within the Bureau for Legislative and Public Affairs (LPA).

Ocean Freight Reimbursement

Ocean Freight Reimbursement Program

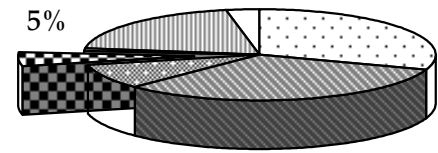

The Ocean Freight Reimbursement Program provides subsidies to private voluntary organizations (PVOs) to ship humanitarian supplies and equipment overseas in support of privately funded development and humanitarian assistance programs.

The Ocean Freight Reimbursement (OFR) Program is the oldest ongoing PVO support program. The Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, Section 123 (b), authorized the creation of the program and, as amended, allows the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) to subsidize registered U.S. PVOs for their ocean freight transportation costs. The program is unique because it allows small and newly registered PVOs to participate in the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation grant process that is highly competitive, yet less complex than other grant processes.

Small competitive grants are provided by the program to U.S. PVOs each year. Funds are used to reimburse the PVOs for the cost of transporting donated commodities (such as medical supplies, agricultural equipment, educational supplies, and building equipment) to developing countries.

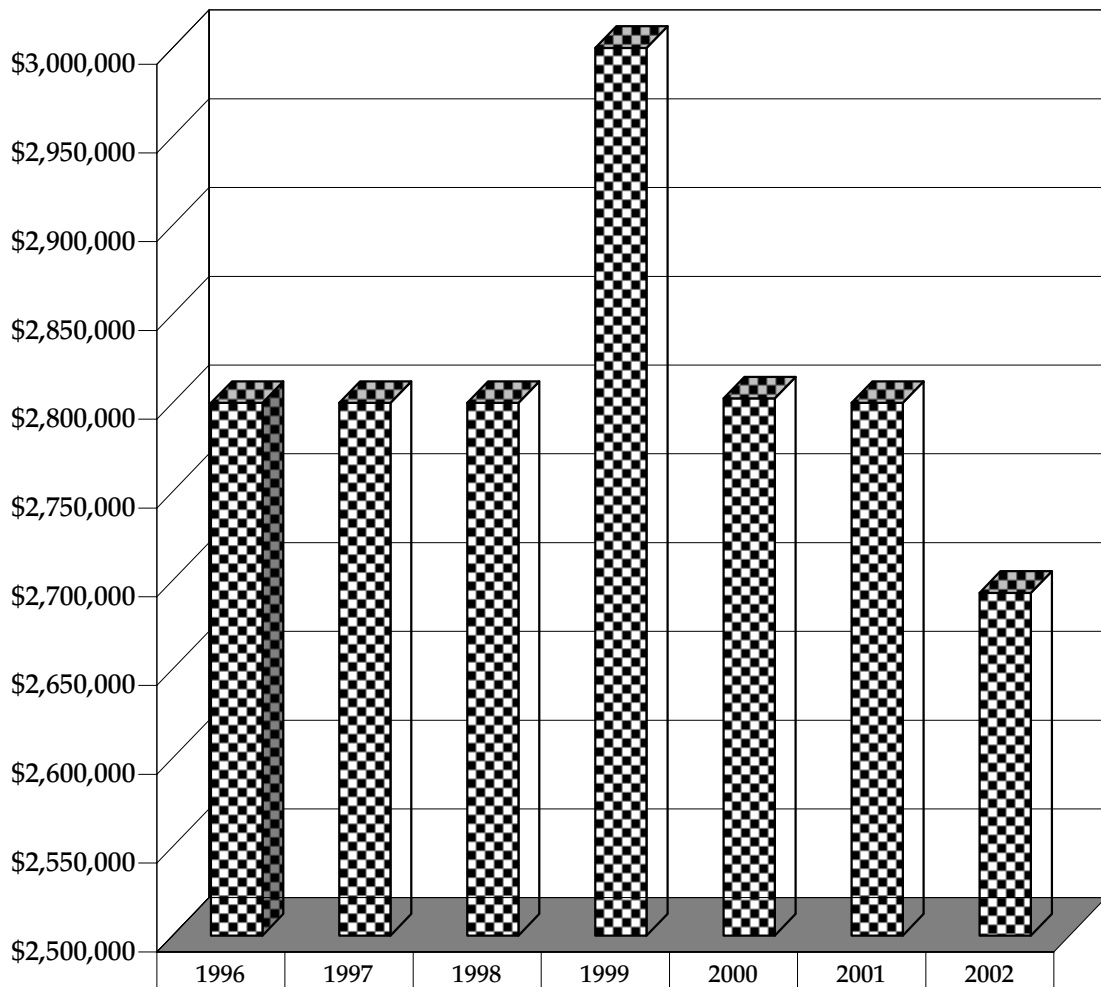

The OFR Program helps USAID expand its pool of developing partners by reaching out to small and newly registered PVOs and by providing grants to many first-time applicants. In fiscal year 2002, the Agency funded 48 PVOs in the OFR Program. Although USAID reimburses the costs of ocean freight, participating PVOs are responsible for ancillary costs, such as commodity acquisition, warehousing, insurance, local transportation, and distribution. The program leverages resources many times the size of USAID funding.

Victims of Torture

Victims of Torture Grant Program

The Victims of Torture Grant Program supports U.S. private voluntary organizations (PVOs) to institutionally strengthen foreign treatment centers and provide basic services to torture survivors. The Victims of Torture Grant Program also supports building the local capacity of these PVO programs.

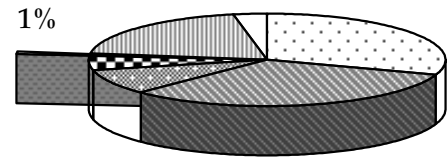

The Torture Victims Relief Act of 1998 authorized USAID to provide assistance for the rehabilitation of torture victims in foreign countries by supporting centers and programs designed to help victims recover from the physical and psychological effects of torture. In 2002, the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) extended the timeframe of, and added funding to, Center for Victims of Torture's (CVT's) initial cooperative agreement, so that CVT can increase technical assistance and training activities to the current group of twelve project centers as well as expand the network of centers served. The original grant program focused on improving the capacity of foreign treatment centers and programs, which provide basic services to victims. In addition, the grant program trained treatment practitioners, built advocacy skills, and strengthened the organizational and financial management practices of these centers.

The objectives of the new project are to

- expand training and technical assistance support to the current twelve treatment centers located in the five regions of Africa (Uganda, Ethiopia, South Africa, Rwanda, Kenya), Asia (India, Nepal, Cambodia, Pakistan, Bangladesh), the Near East (West Bank), Latin America (Peru, Guatemala), and Eastern Europe (Romania and Bulgaria);
- expand the network of project partners to fifteen treatment centers by adding three centers in Bangladesh, Rwanda, and Kenya and providing each of them with technical assistance and project support;
- strengthen regional leadership;
- enhance organizational sustainability of project centers;
- enhance cost-benefit impact; and
- support directly the intent of the Torture Victim's Relief Act.

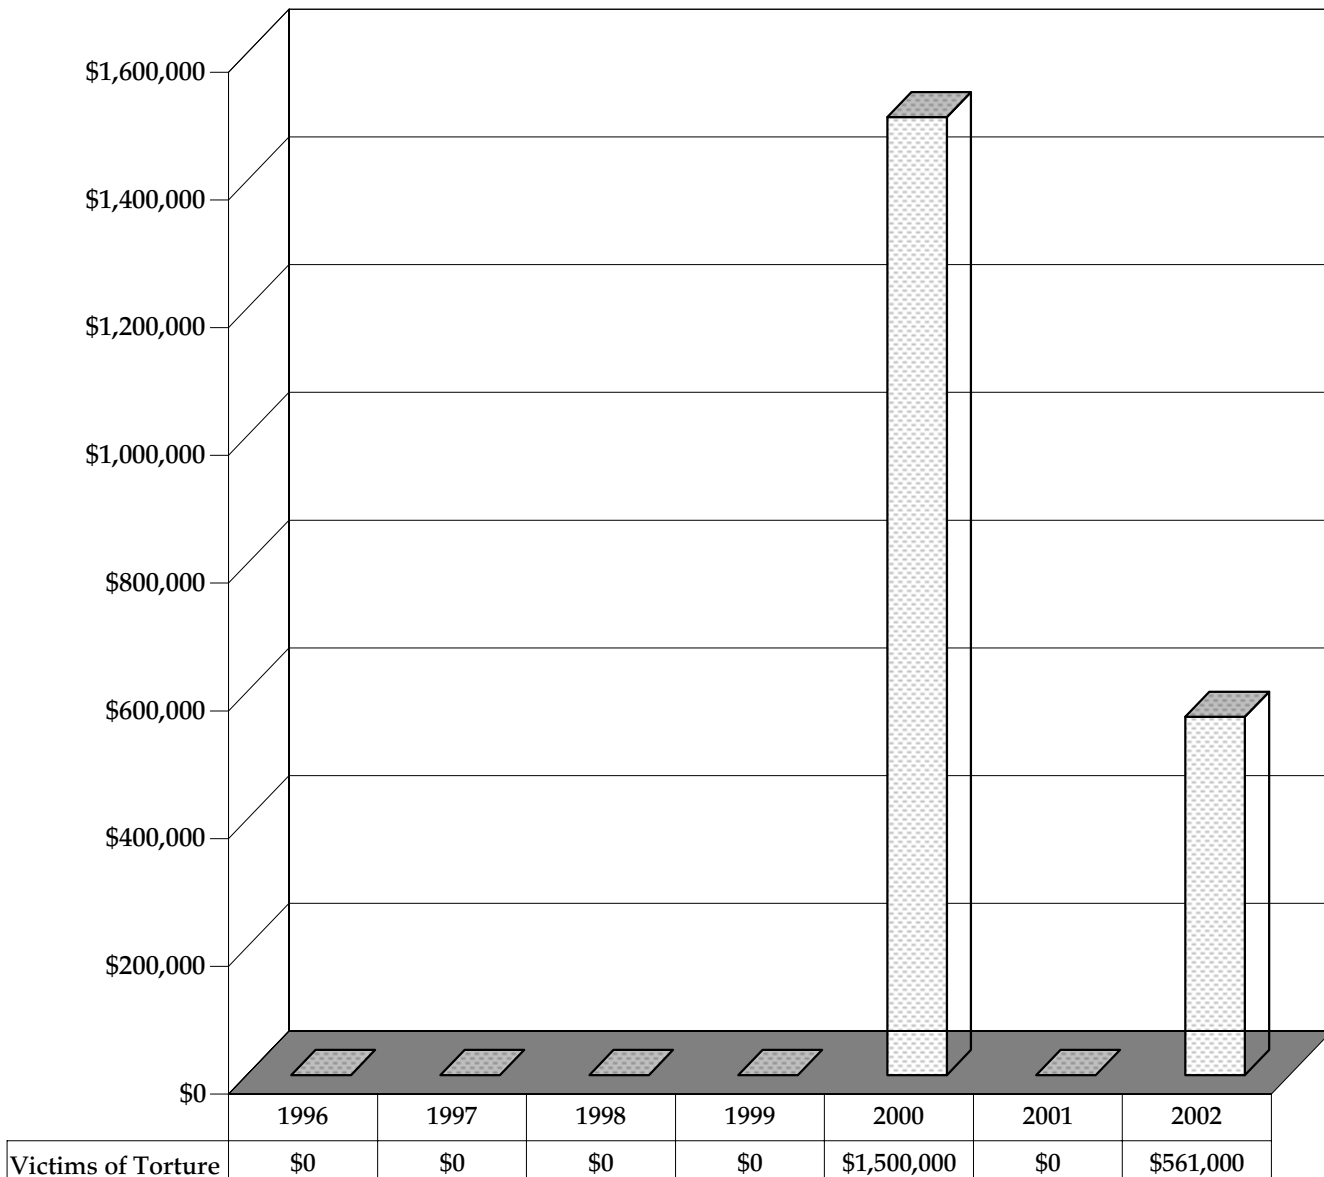

Note: On July 1, 2002, the Victims of Torture Program was transferred from the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) to the Office of Democracy and Governance (DG) within the Bureau for Democracy, Conflict and Humanitarian Assistance (DCHA).

Farmer-to-Farmer

John Ogonowski Farmer-to-Farmer Program

The John Ogonowski Farmer-to-Farmer (FTF) Program provides voluntary technical assistance on a people-to-people basis to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses to enhance the potential for substantial increases in food processing, production, and marketing, which, in turn, stimulate private enterprise and democratic institutions.

The FTF Program was initially authorized by Congress in the 1985 Farm Bill. The program began as a pilot project to provide technical assistance to farmers in Central America and the Caribbean. In 1986, the program was expanded for worldwide operation, and became commonly referred to as the Worldwide FTF (WW-FTF) Program. In 1991, a Special Initiative of the FTF Program was authorized as one of the first U.S. assistance programs for the New Independent States (NIS). This program was referred to as the NIS FTF, which continues to operate today in all twelve of the NIS countries. The 1996 Farm Bill reauthorized the FTF Program through the year 2002.

The 2002 Farm Bill again reauthorized the program through FY 2008 and renamed it the John Ogonowski Farmer-to-Farmer Program in honor of the pilot of American Airlines flight 11, which was hijacked and crashed into the World Trade Center on September 11, 2001.

As stated in its authorizing legislation, the purpose of the FTF Program is "to assist farmers in increasing food production and distribution by improving the effectiveness of farming and marketing operations." The program relies on the expertise of volunteers from U.S. farms, land grant universities, cooperatives, private agribusinesses, and nonprofit farm organizations to respond to the local needs of farmers and organizations in host countries.

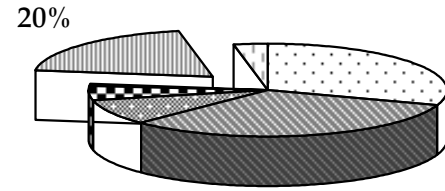

The FTF Program is an effective and flexible mechanism for transferring the technology, knowledge, and skills of U.S. agricultural volunteers to farmers, farm groups, agricultural education institutions, and agribusinesses worldwide. Volunteers have been recruited from all fifty states and the District of Columbia. In general, these volunteers are not overseas development professionals, but rather individuals who have domestic careers, farms, and agribusinesses, or are retired and want to participate in development efforts. Volunteers spend about a month in the host country. FTF Program volunteers have provided assistance to individual farm enterprises, cooperatives, farmers' associations, agribusinesses, rural credit institutions, and agricultural youth groups. Many times, partnerships develop between host country organizations and U.S. organizations, some of which are formalized by written agreement.

In the WW-FTF Program, more than 3,000 volunteer assignments have been completed since 1991 in more than seventy countries. In the NIS-FTF Program, more than 4,980 assignments have been completed since 1992.

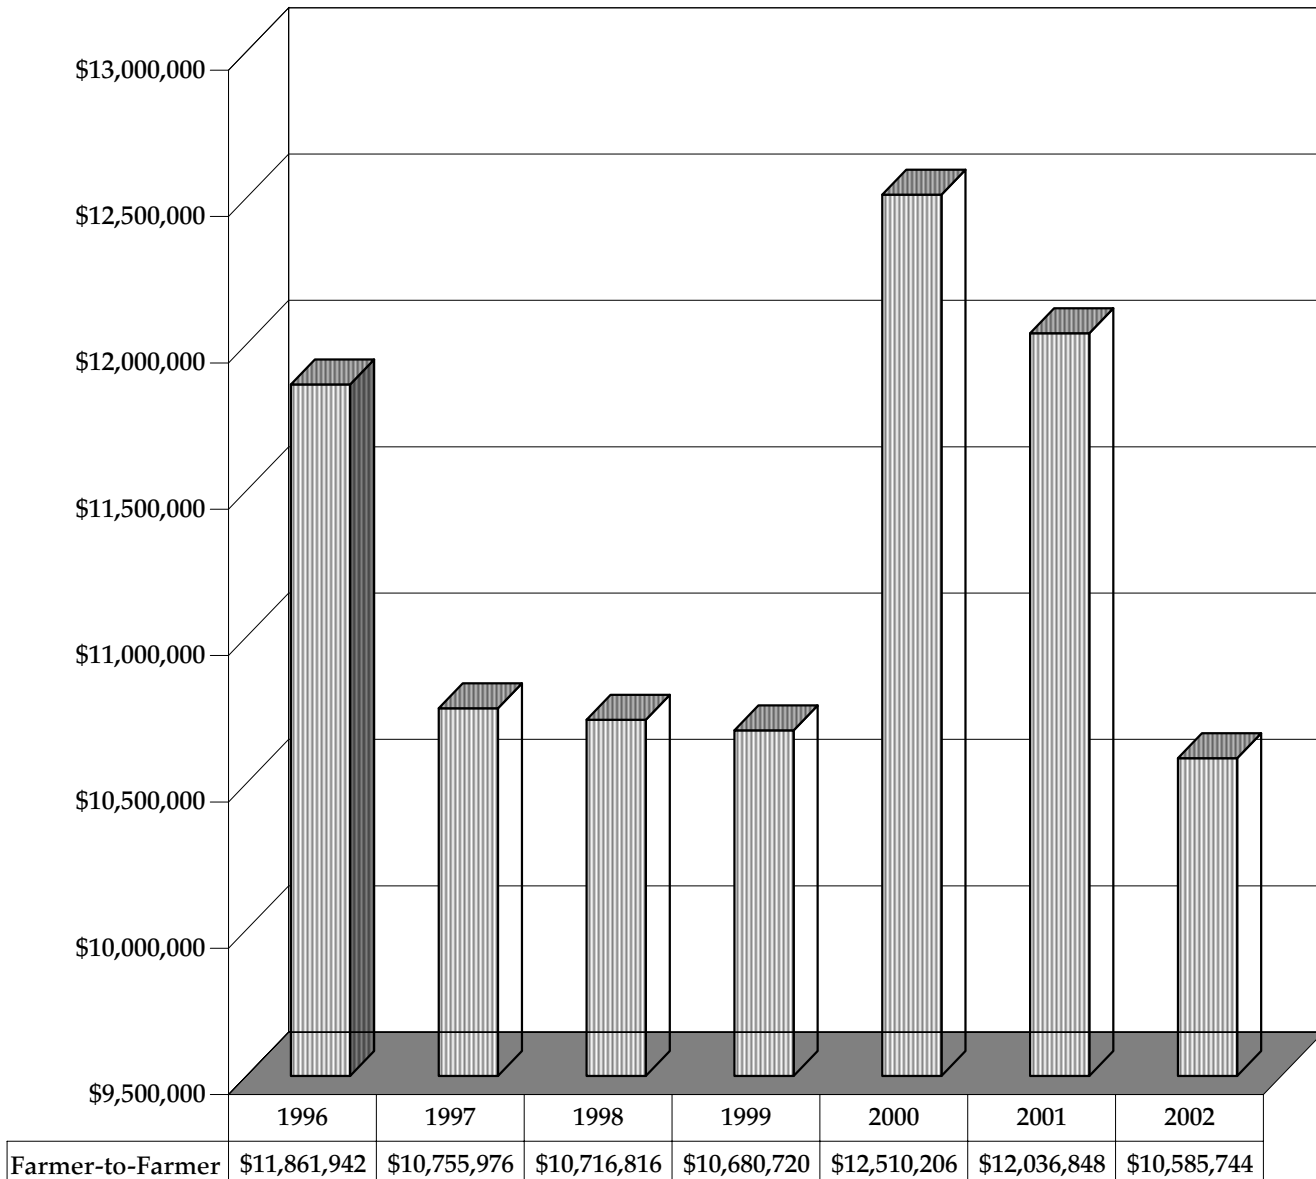

Note: On July 1, 2002, the John Ogonowski Farmer-to-Farmer Program was transferred from the Office of Private and Voluntary Cooperation (PVC) to the Office of Agriculture and Food Security (AFS) within the Bureau for Economic Growth, Agriculture and Trade (EGAT).
